

The Sunday School Lesson

By Ben Newsome

Lesson June 25, quarterly review.
The lessons of the quarter begin with the conversion of Saul and end with the conversion of the jailer at Philippi. Conversion is the chief topic all the way through, a conversion enlarged in its scope from being a redemption of the chosen people of Israel until it was recognized as a call supreme upon all humanity. With the accession of Saul to the ranks of the apostles the gospel became emphatically a message to the Gentiles. It could no longer be confined within the narrow limits of Judaism. Peter learned his lesson of broad-mindedness by his encounter with Cornelius when he became convinced that God was no respecter of persons. There yet lingered the idea, however, that before a Gentile could enter into full Christian fellowship he must become formally Jewish. This mischievous teaching gave rise to a great deal of trouble at different times and places, for it cast a damper upon the freedom of the gospel and worked for discouragement and dissension.

Paul, in his missionary work, found two great obstacles. It was not that the people were not ready to hear and accept the joyful message, but the greatest impediments were the bitter jealousy of the Jewish residents and the vindictive opposition of those whose source of income was interfered with by his teaching. Herod, it is true, tried to stamp out the new faith by bloody persecution, but the logical effect of his policy was to scatter the saints over a greater scope of territory and cause the more rapid growth and spread of the gospel. Good men who would have been contented to worship in peace at Jerusalem were thus forced to go out over the country, and the infection of the new faith gathered zeal and impetus from the attempt to kill it. The same causes have the same effects today. The surest way to spread and intensify a creed is by trying to crush it. Truth will live on anyway, but even error is given an added dignity when subjected to persecution. And it is also true that people will fight quicker for their religious prejudices or for the welfare of their pocketbooks than for any matter of conscience. The interferences of business and the dicta of time-honored dogma are still active in blocking the way of the cross.

Another outstanding truth is that it is unwise and unchristian to condemn people for their errors. Christ hated sin, but loved the sinner. We condemn the sin and embrace the sinner. It is time to turn about. Paul says that he who has gone wrong should be persuaded in love and gently led to resume the right. It is our duty as servants of the Most High to help bear our brother's burdens, except the one burden of individual responsibility, which we must each one of us take with us to the final judgment when the books are opened before the Eternal Judge. Our duty in reforming the world is first to keep ourselves right with God, and then persuade others to do the same.

purchased from the Watson Machinery company of Paterson, N. J., at a cost of $34,465 and it is to be delivered at the prison by January 1, next year. Work of installing the plant will begin immediately after the first shipment arrives at the prison and it is expected everything will be in readiness to begin manufacturing under twine after the first of the year. The plant when completed will turn out about 12,000 pounds daily of the twine. The special session of the legislature, last winter, made an appropriation of $125,000 for the installation and equipping of the twine plant. The enterprise is only one of a number proposed to be established at the penitentiary and other state penal institutions, and is a move in the direction of affording employment for the convicts at these institutions.

SURVIVAL OF FIT IN ROOSTERDOM

"Swat the Rooster" is Slogan Now. Inform Area in a Slaughter.

Special to The World. OKLAHOMA CITY, June 17.—"Swat the Rooster Day" is a new idea in some of the Oklahoma towns, and is being encouraged by the extension bureau of the A. & M. college. Produce men generally are co-operating in the movement by paying a few cents premium for eggs that are infertile. Fertile eggs spoil quickly in hot weather, and Harry Rembleton, state director of poultry clubs, says that many thousands of dollars could be saved annually if the poultry raisers adopted more businesslike methods in handling eggs.

A Problem Solved.
